

SPRINGFIELD NEWS-SUN

Circular school officially historic

National Register of Historic Places adds Tecumseh's unique Olive Branch school.

By Elaine Morris Roberts, Staff Writer

Updated 8:40 AM Monday, January 18, 2010

SPRINGFIELD — Martha Blakley Hahn was thrilled to find out her alma mater has made its way on to the National Register of Historic Places.

Hahn, 100 years old and a 1927 graduate of Olive Branch High School, said she has many fond memories of her time spent at the school, which is now used as a storage facility by the Tecumseh Local School district.

"I got a good education and was very successful. I went on to business college and my education at Olive Branch prepared me so well, I had a salary during the entire Depression," she said.

Hahn shared her experiences Sunday, Jan. 17, during a ceremony held at Tecumseh High School's Pflaumer Auditorium to unveil the official plaque placing the school on the national register.

She was joined at the ceremony by many who had a history with the school, including students, past employees, a former principal and 98-year-old Charline Flora.

The building, erected in 1908 and known as the "Little Round School House," was built with four classrooms that all pointed inward, toward the central cafeteria and gymnasium.

After being destroyed by fire in 1913, it was rebuilt. Olive Branch served as a high school until 1928 and housed classes into the early 1970s.

The Tecumseh school board decided in 1972 to maintain the building and use it for storage after it was decided it would no longer house students.

"That was the best thing that ever happened to that building," said Olive Branch School Preservation Society Chairman William Berry, who was the district's assistant superintendent in 1972.

Berry and the other members of the OBSPS began their work to obtain the historical designation began in January of 2007, with approval coming late in 2009.

Now that the building has been recognized as historically relevant, Berry said work will begin to raise the estimated $1.6 million necessary to restore the building so it can be used as an archival museum and board office.

Staff writer Tom Stafford contributed to this story.

Contact this reporter at (937) 328-0371 or elroberts@coxohio.com.

---

Find this article at:

<http://www.springfieldnewssun.com/news/springfield-news/circular-school-officially-historic-498429.html>

